Mother Teresa — a woman of God

In Kolkata there lived a small woman. Her back was bent with age, her face was wrinkled and her hands were rough with a life time of toil.

Every morning, she would go into the streets. She would stop by scared homeless children, wipe their tears and find loving homes for them. She would visit those who were seriously ill — so sick that no one wanted to come near them. Mother would clean their wounds, give them medicines and food and take care of them.

Mother Teresa went to other countries and places too. She would go to the places of worn-torn lands and help the people. She would go to places where terrible earthquakes or natural calamities had occurred and help the needy. As Mother travelled to help the needy, a wonderful thing happened. Many people decided to follow Mother Teresa's footsteps and take care of those who were less fortunate. These are the Missionaries of Charity.

Mother Teresa did not believe that any of it was her doing. She used to say, "It is God's work that has been done. I am God's pencil. He uses me to write what he likes."

Although Mother Teresa is no longer alive today, she continues to help thousands of people through the Missionaries of Charity.
