Teaching is today considered as one of the important profession. As is true of other professions, within the teaching profession there exists various levels and various areas of work. Within each area of work, such as business education, an important part of joy derived by the worker is evidenced by the worker, is evidenced by his level of, or his stature within the profession. Acquiring a certificate as a business teacher, actually consistutes admission into the teaching profession, is most states two or more types, or level. This one type may be granted on the basis of the bachelor degree with this education. But a higher level certificate may be granted on the basis of the master degree. Thirty semester hours of graduate credit in teaching experience, is required. It appears, that one route by which the business teacher may advance to a higher standing in his profession is through the securing of graduate credit. This method is recognised and used in almost the world.

But of perhaps even greater importance to the teacher in terms of personal satisfaction, prestige, and promotions is the attainment of stature and work within the teaching profession itself. It is assumed, of course, that basic to this is a job well done at all times in the class room. But for true success it is equally important that teacher join hands with others in the guarding and improve the work and standards of the profession. Here in a proper and fitting, that such form on a completely voluntary basis, and that has become customary in all professions.

Thus, in other countries members of teaching profession have voluntarily joined together into one national association known as the National Education Association every teacher is eligible for this association which has been in existence over a century and now numbers over a half million members. There are many for the business teacher to profit from and gain stature in his profession and we can only briefly indicate a few of them here. For an average voluntary outlay of but two or three dollars per month far less than the common labourer often pay in union dues in order to work at his trade the business teacher may belong to his own local state regional and attend participate in their many conferences, and conventions, and have his own monthly, quarterly, and special magazines and bulletins currently on his desk. This is where he needs them and where he will use them.
